It is a sad, sad thing to see a government organization being purchased wholesale. The fact that the justice department is part of the American government makes me profoundly embarrassed. In an environment which actually supports the DMCA, however, I suppose this is inevitable. Since Microsoft has made it very clear it does not intend to stop exploiting consumers, the channel, or manufacturers and was willing to boldly and obviously lie in court, and yet has received what amounts to substantially less than a slap on the wrists is truly truly tragic. There is little justice to be found here. Money has spoken far louder.
